Although faculty may follow subsidiary interests, these interests must never seriously hamper or compromise their freedom of inquiry.

II. As teachers, faculty encourage the free pursuit of learning in their students. They hold before them the best scholarly and ethical standards of their discipline. Faculty demonstrate respect for student as individuals and adhere to their proper roles as intellectual guides and counselors. Faculty make every reasonable effort to foster honest academic conduct and to ensure that their evaluations of students reflect each student’s true merit. They respect the confidential nature of the relationship between professor and student. They do not discriminate against, exploit or harass students. They acknowledge significant academic or scholarly assistance from them. They protect their academic freedom.

III. As colleagues, faculty have obligations that derive from common membership in the community of scholars. Faculty do not discriminate against, exploit or harass other faculty member or staff. They respect and defend the free inquiry of associates. In the exchange of criticism and ideas faculty show due respect for the opinions of others. Faculty acknowledge academic debt and strive to be objective in their professional judgment of colleagues. Faculty accept their share of faculty responsibilities for the governance of their institution.

IV. As members of an academic institution, faculty seek above all to be effective teachers and scholars. Although faculty observe the stated regulations of the institution, provided the regulations do not contravene academic freedom, they maintain their right to criticize and seek revision. Faculty give due regard to their paramount responsibilities within their institution in determining the amount and character of work done outside it. When considering the interruption or termination of their service, faculty recognize the effect of their decision upon the program of the institution and give due notice of their intentions.
V. As members of their community, faculty have the right and obligations of other citizens. Faculty measure the urgency of these obligations in the light of their responsibilities to their subject, to their students, to their profession, and to their institution. When they speak or act as private persons they avoid creating the impression of speaking or acting for their college or university. As citizens engaged in a profession that depends upon freedom for its health and integrity, faculty have a particular obligation to promote conditions of free inquiry and to further public understanding of academic freedom.

Introduction

Members of the Supportive Professional Staff (SPS) perform a wide variety of duties and functions within the community of learners at Northern Illinois University. Recognizing our responsibilities to this university, to the academic community generally, to our respective professions, and to society as a whole, the Supportive Professional Staff Council has adopted the following statement on professional ethics.

The principles that follow are not laws or regulations (such as those enacted by the Legislature, the Board of Trustees, and other bodies), but rather standards that are intended to define, broadly, the essentials of appropriate and honorable conduct for SPS members. No statement of standards can cover all possible eventualities or address all situations with ethical implications, and we are not trying to do that here. At base, however, the Council was guided by five “bedrock” principles, from which all the standards set forth in the following statement derive:

1. Do no harm;
2. Act to benefit others;
3. Act to promote justice and fairness;
4. Be respectful of autonomy (of self and others); and
5. Act with integrity.

The following statement is proffered as a minimum standard of professionalism, not as an objective to be achieved in itself.

Definition

As defined in Article 2, Section 2.52, of the NIU Constitution, Supportive Professional Staff members are “those whose appointments designate them as holding (a) no-rank faculty status, or (b) faculty rank with administrative assignments outside the academic division of the university.”

Statement of Principles

SPS members will strive to apply the following principles in their work, whether that work is with students, university administrators or officials, faculty, Operating Staff, other SPS, or the general public:
I. SPS members shall be dedicated to providing and maintaining excellence in the area(s) of their particular responsibility. They accept the need for critical self-knowledge, discipline, and judgment in all that they do.

II. SPS members shall abide by the standards of professionalism which apply to them—whether as members of a given profession or occupation, as members of the academic community, or as members of the NIU community of learners. They shall be honest intellectually and professionally in their work, and will strive to uphold that honesty by taking appropriate corrective steps (for example, consultation with the Ombudsman or other appropriate university official) with respect to those who may be deficient in character or competence, or who may be engaging in fraud, deception, or other dishonest practices.

III. SPS members shall respect and abide by the laws, policies, and regulations in force at all times. They shall also recognize an obligation to evaluate those laws, policies, or regulations critically, and to seek needed revisions thereto, when they are perceived to be contrary to the best interests of the community.

IV. SPS members shall behave respectfully toward all with whom they interact. They shall strive to remain objective in their dealings with others, and to avoid any harassing or disrespectful behavior.

V. SPS members shall respect, within the constraints of applicable law (and university policies, published standards of appropriate professional organizations, etc.), the confidences and the privacy of others.

VI. SPS members, accepting the obligations and responsibilities attendant upon their common membership in the community of scholars, shall be committed to education. SPS members shall continue to study, apply, and advance knowledge whenever possible. They shall consult other professionals and NIU employees as necessary and appropriate, and shall not fail to give proper credit to those with whom they consult or on whose expertise they draw.

VII. SPS members shall accept their responsibility, to the extent allowed by their primary duties and responsibilities, to participate in activities which contribute to the improvement of the university and to the betterment of the community as a whole, including university governance.

VIII. SPS members shall support access to education for all people who desire it, and the right of all citizens to freedom of inquiry and expression, as guaranteed by the statutes, regulations, and policies of the United States, the State of Illinois, and Northern Illinois University.

IX. As teachers, SPS members shall encourage freedom of inquiry in their students, and respect it in their colleagues. SPS members with teaching responsibilities shall demonstrate respect for their students and those students’ rights, and will ensure that the students’ grades or evaluations will be based solely and fairly on the merits of the students being graded.
X. To the extent that they do not interfere with their primary duties and responsibilities to the university, SPS members may pursue other interests and activities while employed at NIU. SPS members shall not make inappropriate use of university facilities or resources, or of the university’s name, in the pursuit of outside interests.

XI. SPS members are also members of society as a whole, and as such they enjoy the rights and obligations of any other citizen. Those rights and obligations, however, shall be balanced against the SPS members’ responsibilities to their employer, their colleagues, their students (if any), and their profession. When they speak or act as private persons, SPS members shall avoid creating any impression that they speak for the university, the SPS, or anyone other than themselves.
